

Tomatoes (Large)

Avocado prices continue to track below year ago levels due mostly to better imports from Mexico. Last week, Mexico shipped 13.7% more avocados to the U.S. than the previous year. The HASS Avocado Board expects U.S. imports of avocados to remain fairly strong during the next several months with a temporary slowdown around Easter. Further, California supplies are expected to build. These factors could temper any seasonal price appreciation through April. Slowed tomato output in Florida could support tomato prices in the near term.
